About Nova Scotia’s commitment to reducing poverty

Reducing poverty is a multi-faceted issue that crosses most government departments, requires the involvement of community, and benefits most from a collaborative approach. Alleviating poverty involves supporting the capacity of community-based organizations; leveraging and increasing the reach of large service-based organizations; enabling social enterprises/community interest companies and businesses that are seeking a way to make a difference; and supporting partnerships among these groups because collective impact is greater when communities and organizations work together.

Therefore, the Government of Nova Scotia’s four-year Poverty Reduction commitment (announced in Budget 2017) focuses on four objectives:

• Build vibrant communities
• Prevent poverty by breaking the cycle
• Alleviate the effects of poverty
• Enable Nova Scotians to exit poverty

About the Building Vibrant Communities Program

This program offers community grants aimed at building the capacity of community organizations and encouraging partnerships.

Grant Themes

In this first year, grants will focus on three themes:

• Food Security – supporting initiatives that provide Nova Scotians with adequate access to food
• Youth Transition – enabling Nova Scotian youth to become independent adults
• Transportation – helping Nova Scotians to access the transportation they need

Grant applications must demonstrate:

• How the project addresses one or more of the themes
• How the project will be evaluated – how participants will be surveyed
Evaluation of Projects

Successful applicants will need to demonstrate the impact of their project. This will take the form of participant surveys at the beginning and end of each project. The purpose of the surveys is to answer the question: “How do we know this project was successful?”

Applicants must briefly describe their evaluation plan in their application. Successful applicants will receive an evaluation guide that will help them develop effective surveys. Those awarded grants must submit a final report at the end of the project that includes survey results.

Tools for demonstrating impact

Tamarak Institute’s website vibrantcanada.ca has a framework to measure the impact of projects: Sustainable Livelihoods Framework. It describes a holistic, asset-based framework for understanding poverty and the work of poverty reduction. It focuses on capacity/assets and measuring outcomes, while emphasizing strengths and acknowledging barriers to poverty reduction. It sets out five categories of sustainability assets:

- Financial Assets – income, savings, etc.
- Social Assets – cooperation and networking, relationships of trust, collaborations, organizational capacity, etc.
- Human Assets – skills, knowledge, employability, good health, capacity, etc.
- Physical Assets – secure shelter, affordable transportation, accessible and affordable child/elder care, air and water quality, etc.
- Personal Assets – self-esteem and confidence, emotional well-being, etc.
